BODY CAMERA TESTING

1 Baltimore's police department Monday began testing body cameras on its officers. More than 150 uniformed officers and detectives stationed throughout the city will begin wearing cameras to record their interactions with the public. REUTERS

BINGE WATCHING KILLING

2 A New Mexico man who had been watching the hit TV series "The Walking Dead" beat his friend to death because he believed the victim was turning into a zombie, police said Monday. Damon Perry, 23, of Prewitt, New Mexico, is charged with murder after allegedly attacking Christopher Paquin, also 23, with kicks, punches, sharp-edged objects and items including a guitar and a microwave oven, police said. The pair had been "binge watching" episodes of the popular AMC show. REUTERS

BACON CANCER RISK

3 Eating processed meats like hot dogs, sausages or bacon can lead to cancer, and red meat is a likely cause of the disease, the World Health Organization said. The review by the WHO's International Agency for Research on Cancer put processed meat in its Group 1 list, for which there is "sufficient evidence" of cancer links. REUTERS

CEREMONY FOR MISSING SOLDIER FROM KOREAN WAR

7 Shelva Moats (with cane) watches as members of the Army's Old Guard carry the casket of her brother, U.S. Army Cpl. Robert E. Meyers, during a burial service for Meyers at Arlington National Cemetery on Monday in Arlington, Virginia. Meyers, whose remains were only recently identified due to advances in technology, was declared missing in action in December of 1950 after his unit was involved in combat operations near Sonchu, North Korea.

SXSW KILLER TRIAL

4 Jury selection started Monday in the murder trial of a Texas man accused of plowing his car into a crowd at the South by Southwest festival in Austin last year, killing four people and injuring nearly two dozen. Rashad Owens, 23, is facing 26 charges, including capital murder, for the incident at the popular festival. REUTERS

SHIGELLA OUTBREAK

5 Nearly 200 people in the San Francisco area have been sickened by an intestinal disease caused by the highly contagious Shigella bacteria since an outbreak began at a Mexican seafood restaurant 10 days ago, health officials said Monday. The outbreak, which began Oct. 16 at the Mariscos San Juan No. 3 restaurant in San Jose, had spread across six counties and infected 182 people as of last Friday, the Santa Clara County Public Health Department said in a statement. REUTERS

COLLEGE LOWERS FLAG

6 The University of Mississippi stopped flying the state flag on its campus Monday after students and faculty demanded the removal of the banner. The state's flagship university, nicknamed "Ole Miss," lowered the flag during a ceremony and planned to relocate it to the university's archives. REUTERS

Mother lode of

It's your last chance to claim your gold watch or pearl necklace or collectible Bruce Jenner card before the state sells it off.

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroBOS
spencerbuell@metro.us

It's October 2015. Do you know where your Rolex is?

The state was showing off its haul of unclaimed property this week, a pile of merchandise with top-shelf finds like a $2,500 necklace made out of gold coins, a diamond engagement ring and a rare Babe Ruth collectible card. One item, an 1851 U.S. $1 coin the size of a nickel, was valued at a stunning $5,500.

The total value of the goods hovered around $325,000, officials said.

If they belong to you, or a long-lost relative, now is your last chance to claim them. They were set to go up for sale on eBay starting on Halloween at 12 p.m. via the seller ID "mass.state.treasury."

The items ended up in the state's possession after they were found in safe deposit boxes at banks or left over after an owner dies, said state Treasurer Deborah Goldberg.

"There's always a different story for almost every single item," Goldberg said Monday during a show-and-tell in her office.

The goods were set to go on a tour of the state this week, with showings in South Yarmouth, New Bedford, Springfield and Worcester. A cadre of state troopers planned to accompany the items and keep watch over viewers statewide.

The majority were items collected from safe deposit boxes in banks, officials said. The Treasury typically holds onto them for seven years before it's time to liquidate them. There are over 10,000 items in storage at an undisclosed location waiting to be found or sold, Goldberg said.

The state had been holding online auctions for 10 years, netting $2.1 million for the state's coffers. It's been much more profitable to do it that way, instead of reaching just a few bidders at live auctions, Goldberg said.

"There's always a different story for almost every single item."

Before they hit the online marketplace (100 or so at a time for seven weeks of one-week bidding wars), though, Goldberg said the state tries to find the items' owners via placing ads, setting up at fairs and visiting senior centers.

"It is amazing how many people's things come up on the list and how excited they are, even if it's only a $50 gift card they forgot to use," she said. "When we go around the state, those people will say, 'Oh my goodness. I could have sworn in a picture of my great aunt Lucy she was wearing that necklace.' That is the kind of thing that happens."

The onus is often on the claimants to prove that the pewter tray or the massive silver dollar or pearl necklace is theirs, said Mark Bracken, the state's assistant treasurer in charge of unclaimed property.

It's also big business, if one can call it that, for the Treasury. The state expects to take in $325,000 or more this year — but they also have to fork over those pesky eBay sellers' fees, which Bracken said even the commonwealth has to pay.

Nearly half of all the items end up being sold to people who live in Massachusetts, according to Goldberg.

A reminder: The state maintains a list of unclaimed monetary policy — stocks, bank accounts, insurance payments — that officials recently valued at about $2 billion.

Woman charged with uncle's Hyde Park murder to undergo mental health evaluation

The woman charged with killing her uncle over the weekend was ordered on Monday to undergo a mental health evaluation.

Yvonne Lewis, 36, was charged with fatally shooting Clive Francis in a Hyde Park home on Saturday afternoon.

Assistant District Attorney Ian Polunbaum told the West Roxbury Municipal court that Lewis had been staying at the Wood Avenue residence since moving back from Georgia earlier this year. She had been reclusive and acting erratically, Polunbaum said, so relatives called Francis, believing that he could calm her down.

Francis was apparently trying to vacuum pieces of a broken mirror when Lewis allegedly shot him in the head. He was rushed to Brigham and

Lewis PROVIDED

Women's Hospital, where he died.

Prosecutors said Lewis

then stole Francis' SUV. Using a cellphone that was in the car, cops later tracked the vehicle and Lewis to a hotel, where she was found curled up in the hallway.

Lewis will return to court on Nov. 16. NATE HOMAN

Victim of fatal Lower Allston/Brighton shooting identified

Boston police have identified the man who was gunned down and killed in the Lower Allston/Brighton shopping center on Telford Avenue last Thursday.

The deceased was identified as Desmond Joseph, 30, of Allston.

Police responded to a report of gunfire in the Lower Allston/Brighton shopping plaza on 124 Telford Street at 11:45 p.m.

Upon arrival, officers found Joseph, who was pronounced dead at the scene. NATE HOMAN

Treatment-first program working in Gloucester

Officials in Gloucester said Monday they are seeing success in their program aimed at treating, not charging, people struggling with heroin or other opioid addiction.

Since June 1, the Gloucester Police Department has been placing people in treatment facilities, rather than jail cells for possession of opiates. Thus far, 260 people have been placed in treatment facilities. Thirty-four other police departments, including 17 in Massachusetts, have enacted similar programs in attempts to stem the tides of the opioid epidemic.

"We are very encouraged by what we're seeing so far," Chief Leonard Campanello said in a statement. "Now, we are also beginning to see other benefits in crime statistics and monetary costs that also show us that we appear to be on the right path."

Seized heroin PROVIDED

According to the department, drug- and addiction-related crimes like shoplifting, breaking and entering and larceny have dropped 23 percent from June to August in comparison to last year.

The department also said it costs less money to treat someone than it does to lock them up. According to a press release from the GPD, it costs approximately $55 per person in treatment, compared to the $220 it costs to arrest, process and hold a person for one day. These programs cost taxpayers nothing, according the GPD. Instead, this entire program is funded on drug seizure money.

"We are seeing real people get their lives back, and if we see a reduction in crime and cost savings, that is a great bonus," Campanello said. "Perhaps most compelling is that we saw five suspected heroin deaths in the first five months of 2015. Since the program began, we have seen one. One is still too many, but we are most hopeful that the hope of real and immediate help is saving lives." NATE HOMAN

Demi Lovato is not a fan of Poot Lovato

Internet pranksters, Demi Lovato is not amused. Recently, an unflattering photo of the singer inspired a new online folklore legend, Poot Lovato, her fictional twin sister who "was locked in a basement her whole life." The joke spawned a fake Twitter account a full, fan-published back story and a Wikipedia page. And guess what! Demi herself doesn't dig it. "Cool to see a s---ty angle turn into a meme that circulates the Internet to people's amusement ha," she tweeted, using the least convincing laugh I've heard since the last time I tried to do stand-up. "Oh and make actual 'headlines.'" Does this one count? Anyway, she clearly thought better of her complaining, as she deleted the tweet right quick. Or maybe Poot asked her to?

Hospital staff axed for trying to get Lamar Odom pics

The health-care sector is generally a solid bet career-wise, but here's a good way to flush any job security down the drain: Try to take photos of a comatose Lamar Odom that you can then sell to the tabloids. Several staffers at Nevada's Sunrise Hospital were reportedly fired after trying to sneak snaps of the former NBA star while he was under care there, according to TMZ — which is particularly amusing, because who the hell do you think they were going to try to sell them to? The newly fired also reportedly tried to access Odom's medical records, which is obviously a big no-no.

Leah Remini wants to talk to you about Scientology

Leah Remini is not being shy about her dislike of the Church of Scientology — which isn't all that surprising, considering she has a book coming out called "Troublemaker: Surviving Hollywood and Scientology." For instance, did you know: "Being critical of Tom Cruise is being critical of Scientology itself," she says in an interview with "20/20" airing this week. "You are evil." Seems a bit harsh. Remember when people actually used to be afraid of crossing the Church of Scientology because of how much damage it could do to your career or because of all its scary lawyers? So weird, right?

Running with the devil

Erika Christensen falls for a monster on "Wicked City."

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metro.us

ABC's new drama "Wicked City" is aptly named: Set in the anything-goes club scene in L.A. in the '80s, the show follows the exploits of a serial killer (Ed Westwick) and the cop trying to track him down (Jeremy Sisto). But Westwick's Kent isn't just some sick loner—he gets involved with a lonely single mother played by Erika Christensen (most recently of "Parenthood"). As to what could suck someone in to such a monster, well, Christensen says it's complicated.

"She's on such a ride from the moment she meets Kent. She's just in, hook, line and sinker, but she doesn't know where she's going. I think that she's going to learn a lot about herself," Christensen explains.

It seems hard to believe she could be so oblivious to the actions of her paramour, and Christensen says she may eventually work out what Kent's up to. "I think she has to at some point, and I don't know how much she learns, how fast, and how on board she's going to be with it," she says. "But we have to start from the place of knowing that she is madly in love with this person."

And Kent is pretty good at getting people to like him. "He's everything she's ever wanted in a man. He makes her feel comfortable in her own skin. He makes her feel sexy and wanted, and he offers an excitement that she doesn't have in her life," Christensen says of her character. "She's an abused person. She's not been treated well. And so for someone to be a kind of Prince Charming for her, she's going to follow him wherever he goes."

It's certainly a pretty drastic shift in tone from the world of "Parenthood," and Christensen jokes that she's a little concerned about her fans. "Listen, I've been trying to warn them that this is not the same thing, but it should be a whole different kind of fun," she says.

Three new celebrity pop-culture books to binge on Reading high-brow novels like Garth Risk Hallberg's buzzy "City Of Fire" is worth carving out some time for, but sometimes you just want to curl up with something lighter. Luckily, there's no shortage of literary candy coming out.

Here, we highlight three addictive celeb reads to make your commute just a little more enjoyable.

"How To Be A Bad B—h" by Amber Rose (out today)

Amber Rose's definition of a "bad b—h" is "a self-respecting, strong female who has everything together. This consists of body, mind, finances and attitude; a woman who gets her way by any means necessary." The model and actress, who has dated Kanye West, Wiz Khalifa and current squeeze Machine Gun Kelly, offers her tips on how exactly to do all that in this book. She also tells her life story, starting from growing up in a rough part of Philly, and includes tons of never-before-seen photos.

"Kim" by Sean Smith (released Oct. 20)

Cosmopolitan recently dubbed the Kardashian-Jenner clan "America's First Family," and at its center is Kim Kardashian, not just a person but a multimillion-dollar franchise queen. Celebrity biographer Sean Smith takes readers through Kim's life and includes some little-known facts, offering a more behind-the-scenes glimpse than even the celebrity's infamous E! reality show.

"Wildflower" by Drew Barrymore

(out today)

"For some reason I had to write this book. I have become more private every year, and yet these stories were beating on the door of my heart screaming, 'Let me out,'" Drew Barrymore says in her memoir, "Wildflower." In it, she gives an honest look at her childhood and complicated relationship with her father, and highlights some of her worst talk show blunders. One thing's for sure, she didn't hold back while writing this one. EMILY LAURENCE

metro.us/horoscopes

Aries A hobby can be turned into a moneymaker. Consider teaching. Educational facilities offer night courses that could provide an outlet.

Taurus Stick to a solitary activity rather than joining group ventures. Personality clashes are likely if you have a difference of opinion with a colleague.

Gemini A new hobby will help to stave off feelings of lethargy. Damage to a friendship will occur if you unwittingly reveal private information.

Cancer Overspending on luxury items will compromise your budget. Don't try to impress others with showy displays of wealth.

Leo Consider your future. Reflect on your past and make a realistic evaluation of what educational advancements you should be making.

Virgo There is an aura of positive force surrounding you today. Family, friends and romance will all play a major part in your life.

Libra Don't take your frustrations out on others. Your emotions will be close to the surface, so choose an activity that requires concentration.

Scorpio You are best to focus on affection and love. Make the most of your romantic feelings and spend extra time with someone you care about.

Sagittarius Don't risk your position by being indiscreet with one of your peers or openly discussing how you feel about the people you work with.

Capricorn A financial seminar will provide a beneficial moneymaking strategy. Leave time at the end of the workday to de-stress by pursuing a creative passion.

Aquarius Family members will be hard to deal with. Don't make unrealistic demands or promises. Combative sessions can be avoided if you follow through.

Pisces Someone from your past will come to mind or reappear in your life. Your powers of persuasion will help you get your way. EUGENIA LAST

Take health scares out of Halloween

The night's spooks should all be in good fun. Here are a few suggestions for making the celebration a little less frightful.

EVA KIS

Keep an eye on the clock

Daylight Saving Time ends on the same night as Halloween this year, which seems like a good thing — an extra hour on the hardest-partying night of the year is the best treat, right? Maybe. It's easy to let the night take you where it wants, but you could end up getting sick from drinking longer than normal, or being tired enough to fall asleep on the train and end up in Coney Island (and surge pricing is the ultimate party foul). While you do have Sunday to sleep off bad decisions, Monday morning will be a lot less cruel if you turn down at your usual 3 a.m., rather than when the clock says it's 3 a.m.

Rethink trick-or-treating

You don't have to give up Halloween's most hallowed tradition. If going to a club or other big event isn't your speed, organize your own party. The cocktails are easy — a little cranberry juice and anything is bloody, swap the tequila for mezcal and you've got instant smoke and spice — and instead of setting out bowls of candy, ask everyone to bring a home-baked treat. Set up all the pans and plates on various tables and surfaces around your home, and you've got adult trick-or-treating.

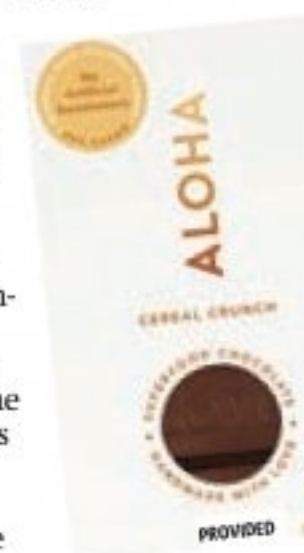

Be careful with colored contacts

Don't make a decision on Halloween that you could regret forever. A recent study out of Japan found that several brands of nonprescription costume contacts contained chlorine and other harmful chemicals, likely from the dyes used on the lenses. Contacts that don't fit your eyes can also scratch the cornea, which can cause infection and blindness. Get a prescription from an ophthalmologist, or find a different accessory.

Get home safely

If you're walking home and feel unsafe but can't rely on calling someone, there's an app that will let a friend virtually walk with you. Available for free (iOS and Android), Companion — originally created for college students who often have to cross dark campuses to get home — can ping one of your contacts (they don't even need to have the app installed) and send them a link to track you on a map. Enter your destination, and if anything happens — you make a wrong turn, start running or the headphones are pulled out of the jack — the app turns the phone into a personal alarm system with loud sounds to scare off criminals and can even call 911. The person at the other end of the app also gets an alert.

3 better-for-you treats

Aloha Superfood Chocolate
It's magic, as far as we can tell, how Aloha crams an entire serving of fruits and vegetables into every bar, plus the usual antioxidant benefits of chocolate (10 times the amount in goji berries, in fact). The cacao is fair trade and organic, and the bars are sweetened only with coconut sugar, which has a lower glycemic index, so you don't have to worry about sugar spikes. Oh, and they're also gluten, soy and dairy-free, and there's nothing artificial in their delicious flavors, either. $49 for six bars, Aloha.com

TruJoy Organic Fruit Chews
Unlike Starburst, there is no corn syrup, artificial flavors or dyes (they're colored with turmeric and veggie juices) in these Vitamin C-packed chewy candies. They also tick most every health-conscious box: certified organic, non-GMO, gluten-free, vegan, cholesterol-free, and 1 percent of every purchase is donated to environmental causes. Each bag contains a mix of cherry, lemon, orange and strawberry flavors. $1.95 for a 20-piece bag, Thrivemarket.com

SunCups Sunflower Butter Cups
Peanut butter cups just might be the king of the candy world, but not for those allergic to peanuts. SunCups makes theirs with roasted sunflower seed butter, and frankly they taste like a sophisticated version of Reese's (maybe it's the hint of sea salt). They're also gluten-free, made without eggs, soy or corn syrup, and come in dark and milk chocolate varieties. $20 for 24 one-cup packs, Suncups.com

Yes, it's worth going to college

Getting a post-secondary degree is absolutely worth it.

For a nation that needs more college graduates, we seem oddly hellbent on discouraging as many people as possible from getting degrees.

The latest headlines, prompted by a multi-year survey on attitudes toward college conducted by Gallup and Purdue University, blared that "less than half of recent grads think college was worth the cost."

You might be surprised to learn, then, that the actual poll of 30,000 college alumni found that the vast majority of graduates agreed that their education was worth the cost. Recent graduates were less enthusiastic than older ones — but only the recent graduates who took out more than $50,000 in loans.

The vast majority of college alumni believe their education was worth the cost. ISTOCK

The the national online survey asked graduates to rate on a 1-to-5 scale whether their educations were worth the cost. Nationally, 77 percent agreed, answering with a "4" (27 percent) or a "5" (50 percent).

The reduced conviction among recent graduates is hardly surprising, since they have emerged with more debt and poorer employment prospects due to a struggling economy. However, as their debts get paid off and their earnings rise, they may have a change of heart.

They also will have a chance to witness what happens to their peers who have only high school degrees as an already-substantial earnings gap continues to widen.

High school graduates earn about 62 percent of what those with four-year degrees earn, according to a Pew Research Center study. In 1979, people with only high school educations earned 77 percent of what college graduates made. Incomes and economic opportunities for high-school-only graduates have collapsed.

The bottom line is that most educations are not worth having to take on massive debt. In addition, not everyone needs a four-year degree. Some people with bachelor's degrees do not earn very much and may have been better off learning a trade or obtaining a two-year degree.

But virtually everyone should consider some postsecondary training if they do not want to fall down the economic ladder. And that is the message we should be sending, loud and clear.

Celtics can't afford slow start

The C's open their 2015-16 season Wednesday and need wins early on.

JAMES TOSCANO
@Jimmy_Toscano
sports@metro.us

As we all know, the preseason doesn't mean a whole lot from a wins and losses standpoint. That said, the Celtics will gladly take a 6-1 record as they prepare for the season opener Wednesday at the TD Garden against the Philadelphia 76ers (7:30 p.m., CSNNE).

The C's seem like an improved team after last year's surprising second-half run to the playoffs. The Celtics, led by head coach Brad Stevens, are looking to make even more noise this season — and this time from the very beginning.

Last year, the C's got off to a 4-11 start to the season. They played a lot of tough teams in November — games in Houston, Dallas, Chicago and Memphis, with home against the Thunder, Cavs, Blazers and Spurs.

While they'll see some of those teams early on this season, November doesn't look so daunting.

But regardless of which team is on the schedule, the Celtics should feel they can hang with any team. Too often last year we saw them go down by double digits early on in a game only to stage a big comeback that fell short. Locking in at tip-off is going to be key for this year's team.

"The way that I'd phrase it is, 'Just get off to a good start,'" Stevens said after the team's final preseason game. "You have to start games well, you have to start third quarters well. And then you have to be able to finish quarters. And there have been moments that — we're going to find out that a starting group starts games well, starts third quarters well, and if not we'll make changes swiftly, because we can.

"So, hey, it's a long year, but you've got to start well and you've got to be prepared to play. And I think when you're generally prepared to play you look engaged, you sound engaged, and you come out ready to roll right from the get-go."

The Celtics have started Marcus Smart, Avery Bradley, Jae Crowder, David Lee, and Tyler Zeller in four preseason games this year — including the final two — and it's assumed that those five will get the start when the regular season begins.

But Boston has the depth and the interchangeable parts to allow Stevens to get creative with his lineups, as long as his guys stay healthy.

Heading into the regular season, health is on the Celtics' side — and they're out to prove talent is on their side too.

"We all grew up being the best player on our team, respectively, and competing and winning," Smart said. "We all are used to winning. So, when we get out there against somebody that's just as good as us, we want to show what we have and showcase our talents."
